About

Scott Duncan is a co-founder and partner of BaseRock Partners. He brings more than 20 years of financial advisory experience to the firm, including 15 focused exclusively on construction and construction materials M&A transactions.

Prior to co-founding BaseRock Partners, Scott served as Managing Director at FMI Capital Advisors, where he co-managed the company's construction materials group. Prior to that, he led corporate strategy and mergers and acquisitions for Lafarge North America (now LafargeHolcim) in the Western United States.

Scott's transaction experience spans all types of construction industry clients, including general building contractors, heavy civil contractors, and a wide variety of specialty contractors. Scott also maintains extensive transaction expertise in construction materials markets, such as cement, aggregates, ready-mix concrete, hot-mix asphalt, and integrated paving firms.
